Highett, Vic.; Draft Resisters' Union; n.d. (1971).

An important historical document from the Vietnam War era, providing a practical guide for individuals opposing the draft. The manual offered strategic advice on legal, moral, and ethical ways to resist conscription, including navigating legal loopholes, conscientious objection, and civil disobedience. It became a vital resource for draft resisters and activists committed to anti-war movements, highlighting the intersection of personal conviction and political activism. As a reflection of the broader resistance to the Vietnam War, Downdraft remains an important symbol of nonviolent resistance and the right to dissent against government policies. Click here to Order

Ettlingen; Josef Deck; 1983.

This second textbook builds on his earlier work by refining the methods of iridology, offering a more detailed analysis of iris patterns to distinguish between specific health conditions. This book presents advances in identifying subtle variations in iris markings and linking them more precisely to different organs and potential health issues. While iridology remains controversial in conventional medicine due to limited scientific validation, Deck's advancements are significant within alternative medicine, where practitioners find his refined techniques helpful for a more nuanced health assessment. Click here to Order

Isidore Israel Kominisky (1870-1940) was a well-known Melbourne esotericist and jeweller and is reputed to have been a leading member of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. The book blends scientific knowledge with mystical traditions surrounding gemstones. Kozminsky explores not only the physical properties of various gems but also their symbolic meanings, astrological connections, and supposed spiritual and healing powers. This combination of science and mysticism makes the book valuable to a diverse audience, including jewellers, collectors, and those interested in crystal healing and esoteric traditions. Click here to Order

Henrietta Lacks, a Black woman whose cells, were taken without her consent in the 1950s, became the first immortal human cell line. Known as HeLa cells, they have revolutionized medical research, contributing to advances in cancer treatment, vaccines, and genetics. Skloot weaves Lacks' personal story with scientific history, shedding light on issues of ethics, consent, and racial injustice in medical research. Click here to Order

Not in Ferguson. An invaluable document for understanding the economic and social landscape of mid-19th century Australia, particularly New South Wales. St Julian, a journalist and the first Chief Justice of Fiji, compiled a comprehensive snapshot of the colony's industries and natural resources, aiming to attract investment and immigration. From an antiquarian perspective, the book captures both the optimism and colonial ambition of the era, making it both a historical record and a promotional tool of its time. Click here to Order

Baltimore; The Williams & Wilkins Company; 1943.

Foundational text in dietetics and nutrition, marking a pivotal shift in the integration of dietary science into medical practice. Published during a time when nutrition's role in health was underappreciated, it emphasized the importance of proper diet in disease prevention and recovery. Stern bridged the gap between scientific knowledge and practical application, helping to formalize dietetics as a medical profession. Her work also advanced public health by advocating for nutrition education. Today, her principles continue to influence medical treatment, preventive health care, and the professional training of dietitians. Click here to Order

Proceedings on Laying The Memorial Stone of the Wilson Hall of the University of Melbourne.

First Edition; Med. 8vo; pp. xxx, 42; two folding illustrations of Wilson Hall one of the outside the other of the interior, original printed wrappers, it would appear that some copies of this book have a portrait illustration, this copy does not, small piece missing from corner of front and back wrapper, otherwise a very good copy.

Melbourne; Stillwell And Co., Collins Street East; 1879.

The building was made possible by a donation of 30,000 pound by Samuel Wilson (1832-1895). Wilson arrived in Victoria from Ireland in 1852 to join his three brothers who had stablished squatting runs in the Wimmera during the 1840's. With the assistance of his brothers, he purchased Longerenong station on the Wimmera River, from which beginnings he established a vast pastoral empire. At the time of his donation to the university in 1874, Wilson's income was estimated at 100,000 pound a year and he was reputed to own more sheep than anyone else in the world, with 600,000 head spread across his vast landholdings. Click here to Order
